

SEASON OF LENT ENDS

Society Will Resume Its Sway Again the Coming Week.

Elaborate Wedding Breakfasts on the Wane—Rules for Married Couples—Doings of the Week.

This is the day when the woman with the new Easter bonnet will take pleasure in having for her neighbor the woman who wears the one she had all last winter and the winter before. The woman who has a new spring wrap will probably take cold with it on and will have next to her the one who is comfortable in furs. At every change of season these things occur. The woman in the new looks conscious and uncomfortable. The woman with the old looks, "who cares?" The churches will be crowded, for they will all be decorated with flowers, and the choirs, with the best talent procurable, will sing. The ministers will preach sermons prepared with elaborate care, for they know strangers will be there to hear. In the Sunday schools the children have been learning new songs, recitations and various exercises in honor of the day. In the homes there will be dinners and probably guests to enjoy the feast. The florists who worked all night last night will be glad that the day, or, at least, their part, is over and that their coffers have been replenished. Presents, to mark the festive day, have been changed and received. All the hurry and worry of the individuals who have been rushed to get all this ready in time is over and the next holiday is anticipated.

Colored Waistcoats.

Colored waistcoats of every conceivable material are to be quite the fashion this spring. Dainty bits of brocade and damask have been unearthed from old trunks and most stunning effects have been gained. Waistcoats of duck and pique will be much worn later, but these more gorgeous affairs will be worn until the linen duck and pique suits can be put on. With these waistcoats the stiff linen shirt fronts and mannish little ties are a necessity. The collar must be high and fit perfectly, and the ties must always be absolutely immaculate.

Wedding Unions.

Happily, elaborate wedding breakfasts are on the wane, and simple, light refreshments are often served for the final meal of the bride under her father's roof. Whether this is because people have realized how much more useful the money spent in an elegant collation might be to the young people just starting out in life, or whether the change is simply a decree of inconstant fashion, the result is equally advantageous.

Marriage Rules.

Let her meet him with a kiss—not a frown.
Let each realize the fact that they are one.
Let the husband frequent his home—not the club.
Let her assist her in beautifying the home.
Let her not narrate Mrs. Next Door's gossip.
Let her not worry him with petty troubles.
Let him speak to his wife—not yell "say!" at her.
Let her make home more pleasant than the club.
Let her sympathize with him in business cares.
Let him be as courteous after marriage as before.
Let his latch-key gather unto itself rust from disuse.
Let her dress as tastefully for him as for strangers.
Let him confide in his wife; their interests are equal.
Let her not fret because Mrs. Neighbor has a rich dress.
Let her home mean love and rest—not strife and noise.
